When I first started attending UNR, I wasn't sure if I would like the school. However, as I progressed through the school year and the fall quarter, I fell in love with the creative and academic departments in the department of Interdisciplinary Arts. I learned that there are so many ways to create, connect, and explore topics. The department of Interdisciplinary Arts provided me the opportunity to experience learning outside of a traditional classroom setting. I loved that I was able to mix many different subjects together and still be able to create beautiful visual work. The Interdisciplinary Arts program is a great way for students to explore different fields, learn about different topics, and meet their professors in the classroom. It is a great environment for people to express themselves creatively without the fear of missing out on a grade. However, I feel like my time at the department of Interdisciplinary Arts and UNR has come to an end. I graduated last month, and I'm on my way to Oregon State University to pursue my Masters in Studio Art. I moved to Oregon with the college education I've been working towards and that goal is no longer a reality. It is the beginning of a new chapter in my life. The time I spent here at UNR, it helped me come to a decision that I want to be a full-time artist. I'm not sure if that will happen in the near future, but I would like to continue to pursue art and that's why I'm starting a new blog.
