Just as the name says, it has built-in chat rooms, forums and instant messaging. That said, the interface is somewhat less elegant than some of the competition. But, unless you're quite keen on all the bells and whistles, you probably don't need the extra web space that the more robust applications require. For small-time message-senders who want to do all of their chatting in one place and accept incoming messages, Edulis Golden is a viable solution. The setup process is very simple. Within a couple of minutes of installation, you can get in contact with other Edulis Golden users. If there's someone you want to talk to, type their name in the search box and hit Search. The results will show the users who are currently online. Once you've found a user, click on their name and you'll be taken to their contact page. Edulis is still rather small when it comes to features, but the addition of photo printing and a chat client are nice touches. At $20 a month, Edulis Golden is a surprisingly affordable way to keep in touch with friends and family. And if you're looking to add a new family member or friend, the service makes it very easy to find someone and get started. For those who are business minded, it's also worth noting that the virtual contact list feature lets you create groups of friends that
