EUROPA UNIVERSALIS IV; Dedicated to Christopher Macdonald For almost two decades I have dreamed of creating an alternate history of the European continent during the Renaissance. In 2004 I finally decided to make that dream a reality and began creating a history that was different in almost every detail. One major exception was the inclusion of Venice. The Italian city state developed into one of the world's greatest commercial powers, rivaling that of China and the Spanish empire. In the process Venice also became the most powerful naval power in the world. All of this was accomplished by my player character, Giordano Bruno. With four other writers I have collaborated on a short story collection based on my Europa Universalis IV game world. Through the first four chapters Giordano Bruno's story has taken him from the 1440s to 1461, from the year of the Turks' first seizure of Constantinople to the rise of the Tuscan city state of Florence. This ebook collection includes the short stories contained in this volume, as well as a collection of 10 additional alternative histories of the

BOSTON SUMMER SHOWCASE 2017 I posted this on Instagram a few days ago, but I wanted to share it here as well for those who may not have seen it. This year it was held at the Cambridge Country Club, a historic golf course in Cambridge, Massachusetts. The staff there was super friendly and accommodating! I was able to meet some great students and educators. Also, I had my friend (and chief photog) Brian Quinn with me. I had the opportunity to test out my DSLR for a week and I was able to get some nice shots in the process! This is an exciting year for me, but I will only begin to realize how fun it will be when it comes to shooting all the different projects I have lined up. Stay tuned for my adventures as a freelance photographer! Our Favorite Instagram Posts Disclaimer The pictures and content on this blog are not representative of the team or my university. Suggestions in Europa Universalis IV Since the first month after the release of Europa Universalis IV was pushed back, while some Paradox Production Studio developers have been driving the project forward, other members of the community got their hands on the game to do what they like with it. Thus, a whole bunch of alternate history suggestions for Europa Universalis IV have popped up on our forum. This is the first article that introduces you to some of these suggestions. There are three types of proposed scenarios: Scenario A: This scenario is linked to a specific region in Britannia, or a connected set of regions, where the world has been completely different. For instance, the Union has won the Crimean war, or the Targuen dynasty has lost to the Poles. Scenario B: These scenarios are linked to certain historical events, but with significant changes. For instance, this could mean that Claudius died by poisoning and Britannia has a republic instead of a monarchy, or that the Spanish empire has won the African slave trade. Scenario C: These are fully independent scenarios where the player has significant freedom to design the player-controlled character. I have organized the scenarios by author. First, I'll briefly present the different scenarios, put them in chronological order, and then give you a summary of the game mechanics proposed in each. To give you an idea of how the mechanics work, I'll demonstrate a few of these playthroughs on this new server, which I've constructed to play around with the mechanics of Europa Universalis IV. The father of alternate history and a master of alternate history-building is Greg Tito, author of Chapter XXII. He's also our in-house writer for Paradox Interactive and the lead fiction developer for Europa Universalis IV. And unsurprisingly, he's got some wonderful ideas for alternate europe, such as Brittany as a Saxon Protectorate, or Hungary as a German crusader state like Bohemia. Who else can you expect to have such fantastic ideas? Any historian should run quickly from the mention of a Saxon Protectorate, as Henry VIII destroyed Saxony in the 15th century in a peace treaty with Poland. If the world is changed, the player is free to go back and correct their mistakes. The second scenario from the Golden Horde Master is quite interesting. As you might expect, it's based on the Crimean Khanate. What you might not know (or
