“FIFA 22’s motion technology introduces a level of animation and player fidelity we’ve never seen in the series before, allowing for the most authentic, nuanced, and precise football experience,” said Peter Moore, Co-Publisher at EA SPORTS. Cut above the rest: FIFA 22 utilises "HyperMotion Technology," which is powered by motion capture data collected from 22 real-life players, including the likes of Lionel Messi, Ronaldo, Neymar and others. The data is used to accurately recreate the movement patterns of these players in-game, providing a realistic game experience. (Credit: EA SPORTS) "We are absolutely thrilled to finally share that our entire FIFA team has been hard at work crafting the most intuitive and immersive football experience imaginable to date," said Oliver Bierhoff, Co-Creative Director at EA SPORTS. “Our goal has always been to give you the best chance to win and gain an edge on your opponents through tactical insight, innovative gameplay systems and a total immersion of the game. It's amazing that we are able to put those three factors together in a consistent fashion and create the most authentic football experience," said Tim McMahon, Creative Director, FIFA. More Playable The new "Playmaking" cards are an "action-packed" way to unlock rewards during gameplay that makes the game more accessible for beginners and more challenging for experienced players. The "Ultimate Team" system is going to make The Journey to your Ultimate Football Team even better. Now everyone, fans and players, will be able to gain rewards from the new "Playmaker Challenges" and "FIFA Moments" feature.

Improved User Interface The Big Moments within the game will now be highlighted more effectively in the interface. Also, the new Visualise Pad will help players understand how the new game system works and how their tactics would work out on the pitch. Finally, the Visualise feature will show a clear picture of the new way players interact with the game. "We have been listening to feedback from fans, as well as working closely with clubs and leagues, to make sure the game is the most authentic it could be,” said Henry. “We are proud of FIFA 22’s innovations and the incredible work done by our incredible team.” “The entire FIFA team has worked extremely hard to transform FIFA into the best football game there is for
