. 100% of cases.. A real world example of role definitions can be found in the Word-. In the following we have a small amount of relevant addons that we will add to the root addon of each email. You will see that they all add the same functionality to the root addon. Thus, it is fair to say that all of these addons are part of the same super addon. As you can see, all the addons support a smart list of contacts who either send too much email or where you don't want to send them emails. A good example of this is an owner of a company who is good at sending emails, but not at reading them. In this case, the smart list would recognise that the sender is not required and the send button is not needed. The email can be sent from the inbox instead. This is done via the Keyword Addon and there is a good example in the email sent by Felix. The smart list he uses to check if the keywords are needed, check the email address and send the email to the inbox. Most email providers have a read receipt. This means that the email will be received by the recipient and the message "I have received your mail" will be attached to the message. This is done automatically by most of the addons. If you don't care about read receipts, you can disable them for email through the Account Settings. By default, the addons are set to not start automatically after installation. The default setting can be changed through the Setting. If you click the grey bars on the right side of the screen to view the settings you can see that the email that is currently being sent will be shown in the center. Here you can choose the email account from which to send the email. You can also send from the Inbox. In this example, the email address that you use will be in the center of the screen. This is because the sender is email not known. You can also select email accounts that have their status showed in grey. You can also change the addons to not show the count of emails inside the Bcc [blind carbon copy] section in the header. Lastly, you can choose to appear in the shaded area on the left side of the screen. This will enable users to easily change the addons from the shaded area if a new version is released. The addons are not a fully working, or a 100% solution
