Escape from Labyrinth is an action-adventure video game developed and published by Mindscape Entertainment for the Nintendo Entertainment System (NES) in 1986. It is the first example of interplanetary non-linear gameplay, mixing action, puzzles, investigation, and mini-games. Escape From Labyrinth was originally released in North America on April 29, 1986. It was later ported to TurboGrafx-16, Game Boy and Super NES. A modified version of the game, Escape from Labyrinth I, was released in 1987 for the MSX2 computer system, but in 1992 was released for the Nintendo Entertainment System and Game Boy. In Japan, a sequel was released for the Sega Game Gear later in the year. The player assumes the role of a prisoner who must escape from a labyrinth filled with traps by solving puzzles, finding weapons, and using animals to find their way out. Actors Charles Siebert, and James Belushi voice the main two characters, King Artijaz and Lady Oradnik. In later ports, the player is able to choose between a male or female character. Gameplay The main character of the game, Larry, is a prisoner that has been brought to an ancient pyramid. In each level, the player has to navigate a maze and solve a series of puzzles, and use weapons to progress. The environment is placed in two terrains, with different environmental elements and hazards. In the first map, there are lava pits, falling boulders, and an ash cloud that obscures the player's vision. Overworld elements include the battle of the Earthling animal, and a forest. The second map has puzzles requiring the player to manipulate water levels. Lava areas are reduced to pits and platforms while other puzzles are water based, like crossing ice bridges. There are four main worlds (regular, power, sirens and castle), each with unique puzzles and colors. The game can be played in either a single player mode or a two player mode, with the second player in the game able to take control of the King Artijaz. The player saves the game at certain points, and has a choice between saving at the top of each level or the bottom. If the player saves at the top of a level, he will be teleported to the bottom of the level. If the player saves at the bottom, he will be thrown into the lava pits. If the player progresses far enough he will encounter an exit to the next world, which can function onDownloadButtonClick() { document.getElementById("downloadButton").setAttribute("href", ""); } Time course changes in the effects of melatonin on the expression of proteins related to apoptosis and oxidative stress in the corpus luteum of the immature goat. The effects of melatonin treatment on the apoptosis-related and oxidative stress proteins in the corpus luteum were studied by immunohistochemistry and Western blot analysis in goats during the first 4 days of the ovulatory cycle. Apoptotic cells were detected by a TUNEL stain and oxidative stress by detecting the protein levels of catalase (CAT) and glutathione reductase (GR) with Western blot analysis. On the first day of the cycle, the CL of all treated groups displayed a number of terminal deoxynucleotidyl transferase (TdT)-positive cells, and 1 μM melatonin treatment decreased the apoptotic numbers in this group. Low levels of CAT and GR were observed on the first day of the cycle, and on the second day of the cycle, the CAT levels of the control groups were significantly lower than those of the treated groups. We found no difference in the number of apoptotic cells and the levels of oxidative proteins on the first 2 days, but the numbers of TUNEL positive cells and the levels of CAT and GR increased significantly on the 4th day of the cycle for both treated groups. The results of this study indicated that 1 μM melatonin suppressed the apoptotic activities on the first day, and that, on the 4th
