When I have taken off the panel and set the new control panel to factory settings, the powersaving features are enabled. Samsung SyncMaster P2450H after installation of new drivers. I was running the latest drivers fro my hardware so I pulled down the latest drivers from NVIDIA's site. SyncMaster P2450H 16:9 Notebook is becoming the majority. With that said, let me run down the list of things I did to install the newest drivers. I have not yet set the control panel to factory settings. With the new drivers installed, the control panel is showing a couple of apps from NVIDIA as 'Registered' but no 'Unregistered' apps. I also see that the control panel is claiming I am using "Microsoft Win7 Operating System" which is what I'm running. So far so good. The new drivers appear to work, the video card driver has been re-installed, and the latest security updates appear to have been installed. So, I'm guessing that the remaining problem is something relating to the control panel. I have re-booted, but the control panel is displaying 'Not responding' with a question mark. Okay, I'm getting somewhere. I can connect to the network via the WiFi adapter on the PC. I can ping the address on my local network (192.168.1.131). 6d1f23a050
