The Samsung Galaxy S10 has received a lot of hype since its release in February, but despite its popularity and market success, Samsung has officially halted sales of the device. In an official letter to customers, Samsung said that due to issues experienced in receiving the right supply of screens for the device, it has decided to halt further sales of the Galaxy S10. "We recognize the important role that you have played in helping Samsung in achieving new heights in mobile phone design, and for helping us create devices that are beloved worldwide. We deeply thank you for your continued support and we hope that you will continue supporting us in the near future," the letter said. According to a Korean tech site, Samsung admitted to the shortages and said that the strategy it adopted to deal with the problem turned out to be a mistake. However, the company did not give any reason to why the supply chain of the panel was not keeping up with the demand. In the end, the delay in production turned out to be a costly affair for the technology company. Despite the struggles, the Galaxy S10 proved to be a success and sold 10 million units since its release. The Galaxy S10 series was launched in South Korea in April. Its other markets, such as the US and European countries, got to see the device early in May before its full release on August 7. The Galaxy S10 has an Infinity-O design, a triple-lens camera system, a 5G capable chipset, and unique facial recognition features.Q: Specifying version of Oracle's kernel in $ORACLE_HOME I am using Oracle's Open Source Edition 10.2.0.4.0 and need to specify version of kernel in it's Oracle directory.
