It was a retrospective analysis of 170 nasopharyngeal carcinoma patients after the non-curative chemotherapy. The analysis of the data showed the following results. (1) The most common presenting symptom was sudden headache. (2) The WHO staging system is limited in its power for assessing the prognosis of patients. (3) The S-Na ratio is more sensitive than the WHO staging system in predicting the prognosis. (4) The status of coagulation system was closely related to prognosis. (5) The infusional chemotherapy should be reduced to 21 days and given in five weeks. The patients should be closely observed during treatment. (6) This chemotherapy would postpone the death due to the invasion of other organs.
