From the webcatalogpedia.com Author: Simon Leamy Date: 29 Jan, 2008 Template: Get Yours 2x4 Final Template HTML Retrieved on: 3 May 2011. "The wheel is a nonobvious structure. Because of the curve of its surface, it is one of the most recognizable design elements of all time. In terms of its shape, a wheel could be understood as a closed curve. This shape is non-Euclidean, which means that it does not have any straight lines or points. Many people have had misconceptions about wheels." The wheel came into existence as early as the Upper Palaeolithic times. There is evidence of wheels from the more recent Mesolithic era. The oldest known wheeled vehicle is from the 7th century BC in Iran. The wheel is an object that seems simple, but its true potential is much deeper. It is one of the world's greatest inventions. Up until the early 19th century, humanity seemed to be without wheels. It was assumed that no structures could be possible, and that the world would be flat. It was not until
