Adobe Flash is the first application used by most of the world's Internet users. Yet, after the Blue Screen of Death problems that Adobe had with its previous Flash Player software, it has been relegated to the dustbin of usage. The last version of Flash Player was released in March 2011 and since then, the Player has been tottering its way to oblivion. Adobe promises a new release in June—a date that, apparently, will never arrive. When will Flash be relaunched? I have no clue, but the longer it takes, the drier its end is getting. But Flash still has its place in today's Internet, even if it is mostly used in "browsers" and, to a lesser extent, other applications. It is still necessary for the HD video stream over the web. And the creative community remains populated by Flash artists, who will never, ever, leave it. Nevertheless, graphic designers and web designers are faced with a difficult dilemma when it comes to Flash. While many will still argue that Flash is a lot better than HTML5, it certainly has its downsides and Adobe should consider relaunching it to avoid turning its own users against it. If even Microsoft is touting HTML5, which was supposed to free the web from the shackles of Adobe, why does Adobe keep stalling its launch and risking its lead in the creative community? Think about it. For all its shortcomings, Flash will always remain the spoken language of the web. If Adobe won't relaunch, others certainly will. There are many complaints in this section. It is not easy to write one. The problem is that there are a lot of people involved in Adobe's Flash projects, and each has a different opinion on them.

LOS ANGELES-(BUSINESS WIRE)- Today at Adobe MAX, Adobe expanded the reach and power of Photoshop CC with new innovations in collaboration, the browser, image editing on the go, and new features powered by the AI of Adobe Sensei. Adobe created Share for Review (beta) to enable users to easily collaborate on projects and break down silos. With the new feature, users can drag and drop images, documents, GIFs, and other content into Photoshop with a single click and leave it to Adobe to put them together into a professional-quality project. Share for Review makes it easy to review, collaborate, and share screenshots—breaking down the barriers that have kept users from sharing images together in the past. And as part of the Photoshop CC launch, users can view and edit images, including images on the web, in the new browser-based version of Photoshop CC. To help take the process of editing out of the desktop and into the browser, Photoshop CC adds a new photo editing tool powered by Adobe Sensei. The one-click Delete and Fill feature automatically recognizes and removes unwanted objects from the image, creating a seamless image in a single action. This is complemented by new Quick Select, which enables image selection with a single click, even on the web. Additionally, new Quick Mask functionality allows users to identify areas of the image to be added or removed, making it easier to remove areas of the image and create complex edits with Photoshop. Adobe introduced a number of new features to allow users to create and manipulate their images in the browser-based Photoshop CC. Previously, users needed to install a plug-in to see images on the web. Now, users can view and edit web-based images, such as images on a WeChat or SnapChat account, in the new browser-based version of Photoshop CC. These images can be edited by a single click to create seamless edits. Users can also take advantage of a host of new features including new object selection improvements that enable users to better select, modify and understand their selections; image cloning, which automatically replicates an image to create a duplicate of the image; and new Quick Mask functionality that allows users to better understand and create complex edits with images.
